PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

Join us for a presentation on conflicts of interest and ethics in the construction industry. This program looks into business ethical conflicts of interest which may arise for different players and participants in the construction world, and examines what type of behavior is ethical, and at what point might one ethically "cross the line" in responsibilities toward others involved in a construction project.

The presentation will touch upon many areas, including:

- Objectivity: Identifying potential conflicts of interest and disclosing those to the party who would be adversely affected by it
- Honesty: Acting honestly and avoiding conduct likely to result, directly or indirectly, in the deception of others
- Fairness: Refraining from seeking obtain a benefit which arises directly or indirectly from the unfair treatment of others
- Fair reward: Avoiding acts likely to deprive another party of a fair reward for work
- Integrity: Regard for the public interest
- Accountability: Provide appropriate information so effective action can be taken where necessary

The information from this program will help you assess in advance your proposed construction industry engagements and activities, in order to avoid conflict areas and ethical dilemmas, and in the process provide the best and most efficient service to your clients.

FEATURED SPEAKER

DANIEL LUND III is a partner in the New Orleans office of the law firm of Phelps Dunbar, L.L.P., and for his 32 years of practice has been engaged in general civil litigation, focusing primarily on construction industry and surety matters, products liability, telecommunications law and zoning. Mr. Lund received his B.A. degree in philosophy from the University of New Orleans, his J.D. degree from Tulane University, and an M.T.S. degree from Duke University. He serves on the Construction Arbitration Panel of the American Arbitration Association and on the panel of mediators and arbitrators for Perry Dampf Dispute Solutions in New Orleans. Mr. Lund is admitted to practice before all courts in Louisiana and the United States District Courts in Louisiana, as well as the United States District Court for the Northern District of Florida. He has served a member of the American Bar Association Fidelity and Surety Law Committee and is a member of the Louisiana State Bar Association.
